

Forestry Superintendent – Indigenous Relations

Slave Lake or High Prairie, Alberta

The Forestry Superintendent is responsible for the consultation, engagement, and fostering of business relationships with a multitude of neighboring indigenous communities for Northwest Regional Woodlands (Slave Lake and High Prairie). This role will be responsible for arranging consultation between Tolko and indigenous stakeholders and communities and act as a mediator when necessary. The Forestry Superintendent will be responsible for informing and advising Northwest Regional Woodlands staff about indigenous issues, cultures, and trends as they affect Northwest Regional Operations.

What We're Looking For:

- Minimum 5-10 years of related experience and a good understanding of different Indigenous cultures
- Strong negotiation skills
- Excellent communication, organization, and time management skills
- Suggest and support ways to establish and maintain good working relationships between Indigenous and non-indigenous stakeholders, employees, clients, and customers
- Ability to promote Tolko as a potential employer for Indigenous people
- Leading or participating in meetings with Indigenous partners and communities
- A strong understanding of Alberta policy, guidelines, regulations and legislation related to forestry and consultation

What We Offer:

- An unyielding commitment to your personal safety
- Competitive pay and exceptional benefits
- The opportunity to work with the best and brightest in the industry
- A positive, dynamic, and inclusive work environment
- An open, innovative culture with diverse opportunities
- A commitment to investing in our people through training and development
- The chance to live (and play) where you work
